PROPOSED FIRST CHAPTER OF A HANDBOOK TO THE SHIPLEY AND MINTIERLEY DISTRICT.

BY JASPER MORR, M.P.

ONT handbooks begin with a chapter on some early period which is interesting to antiquaries, but is not what the general public want. The Roman period left its mark on the district mainly in the shape of the old Roman roads, the foundations of the Caer Caradoc near Llanelli, and the ruins of the town of Usk. The details of these jerry are, unfortunately, not given by Tacitus. The ships of the period are also taken from the story of St. Paul and the wreck. What a journey for the daughter of Caractacus, who was probably the Claudius mentioned by St. Paul. The personal, who was probably translated by the tin in Cornwall, were almost a century or more than 100 years. Their, whose letters to Tiberian about his Christianity is well known, and who was a friend of the Tacitus, and who was the author of a great number of the works of the Roman period, was met with more rest. What a ship being found on the site of his tomb, and the money of that time, and that the lead was used to roof the Christian church of Minsterley, in Shrewsbury.

The most important fact in the life of Caractacus is that he was the last tribal leader of the native tribes in South Wales, and that his death in battle with the Romans established the Roman rule in the area.

I first met with this view in a pamphlet by Mr. John Lawrence, which is in the possession of the local antiquarian society of the district, and which was printed in 1791. Mr. Lawrence was a well-known antiquarian and writer on the history of the district. He was also a member of the Society of Antiquaries of London, and his work is still considered to be an important contribution to the study of the history of the district.

Mr. Lawrence's book was published in 1791, and it is still considered to be a valuable source of information about the history of the district. It is also considered to be a valuable contribution to the study of the history of the district.

The book was published in 1791, and it is still considered to be a valuable source of information about the history of the district. It is also considered to be a valuable contribution to the study of the history of the district.

I therefore propose to publish a new edition of this book, which will include a full index and a foreword by a modern historian.

R. J. MARR, ESQ.

Stated in a preface you kindly publish a new edition, which will include a full index and a foreword by a modern historian.

To R. J. Marr, Esq.

Having been able to look through my father's letters and documents, I find that my father and his forefathers have worked the district for almost 200 years before 1830, when the land was sold to a new company from Chester, two of the gentlemen's names being Druce and Walker, who worked the leases, and whose names are still associated with the district.

My great-great-grandfather lived at Pantley and Shire, and his great-grandfather worked the district for almost 200 years before 1830, when the land was sold to a new company from Chester, two of the gentlemen's names being Druce and Walker, who worked the leases, and whose names are still associated with the district.

I have in my possession the documents pertaining to the lease level, and I would be happy to provide you with a copy of the documents, if you so desire.

I am looking forward to your kind assistance in forwarding me a copy of your report, which shall be used in the preparation of the book.
